THEME

I wish to speak a word for nature.

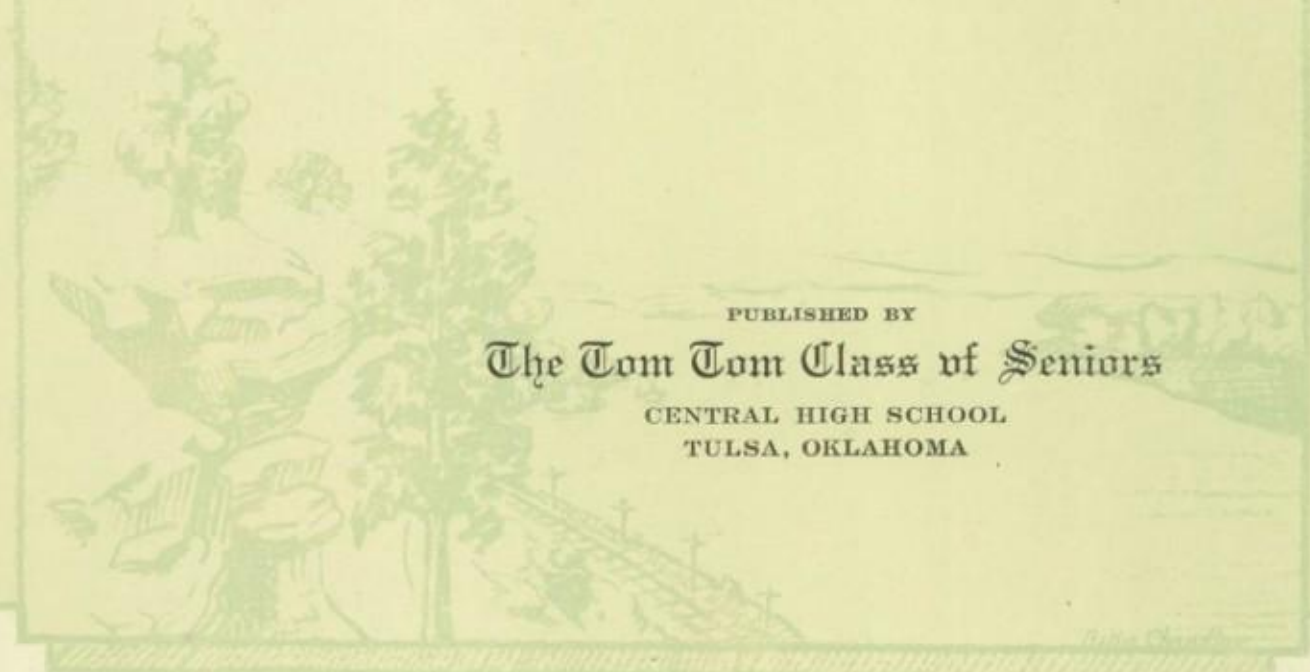

—HENRY DAVID THOREAU

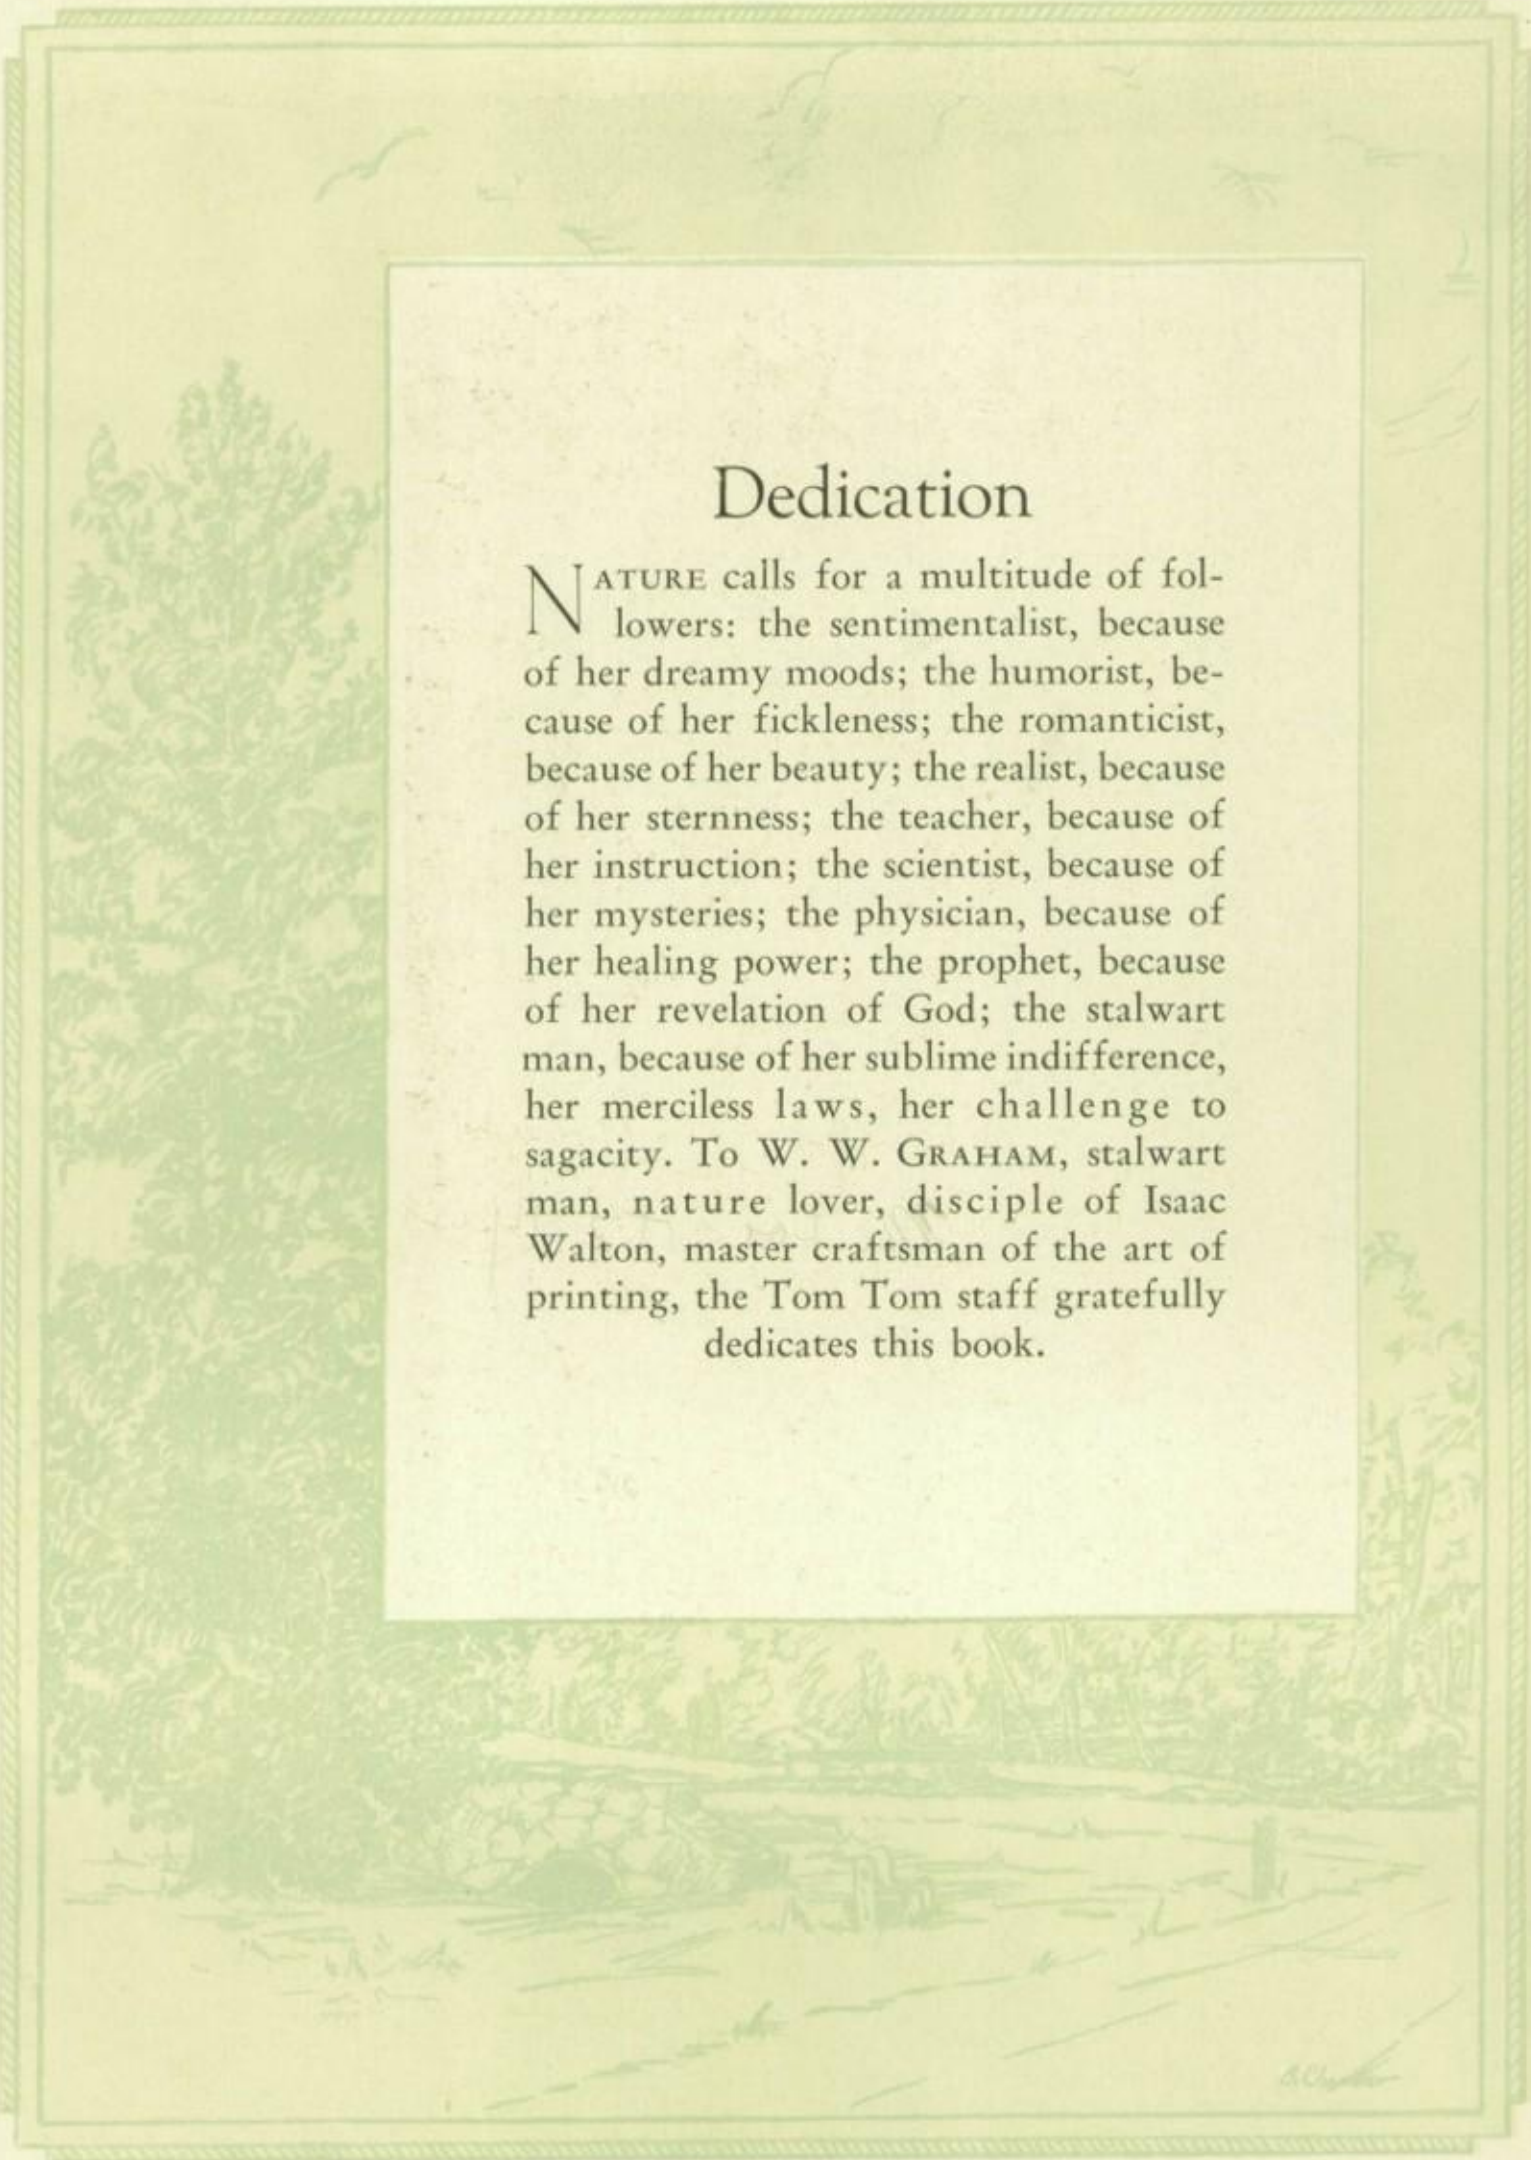

McLoo H.S. Misseldine

PUBLISHED BY

The Tom Tom Class of Seniors

CENTRAL HIGH SCHOOL
TULSA, OKLAHOMA

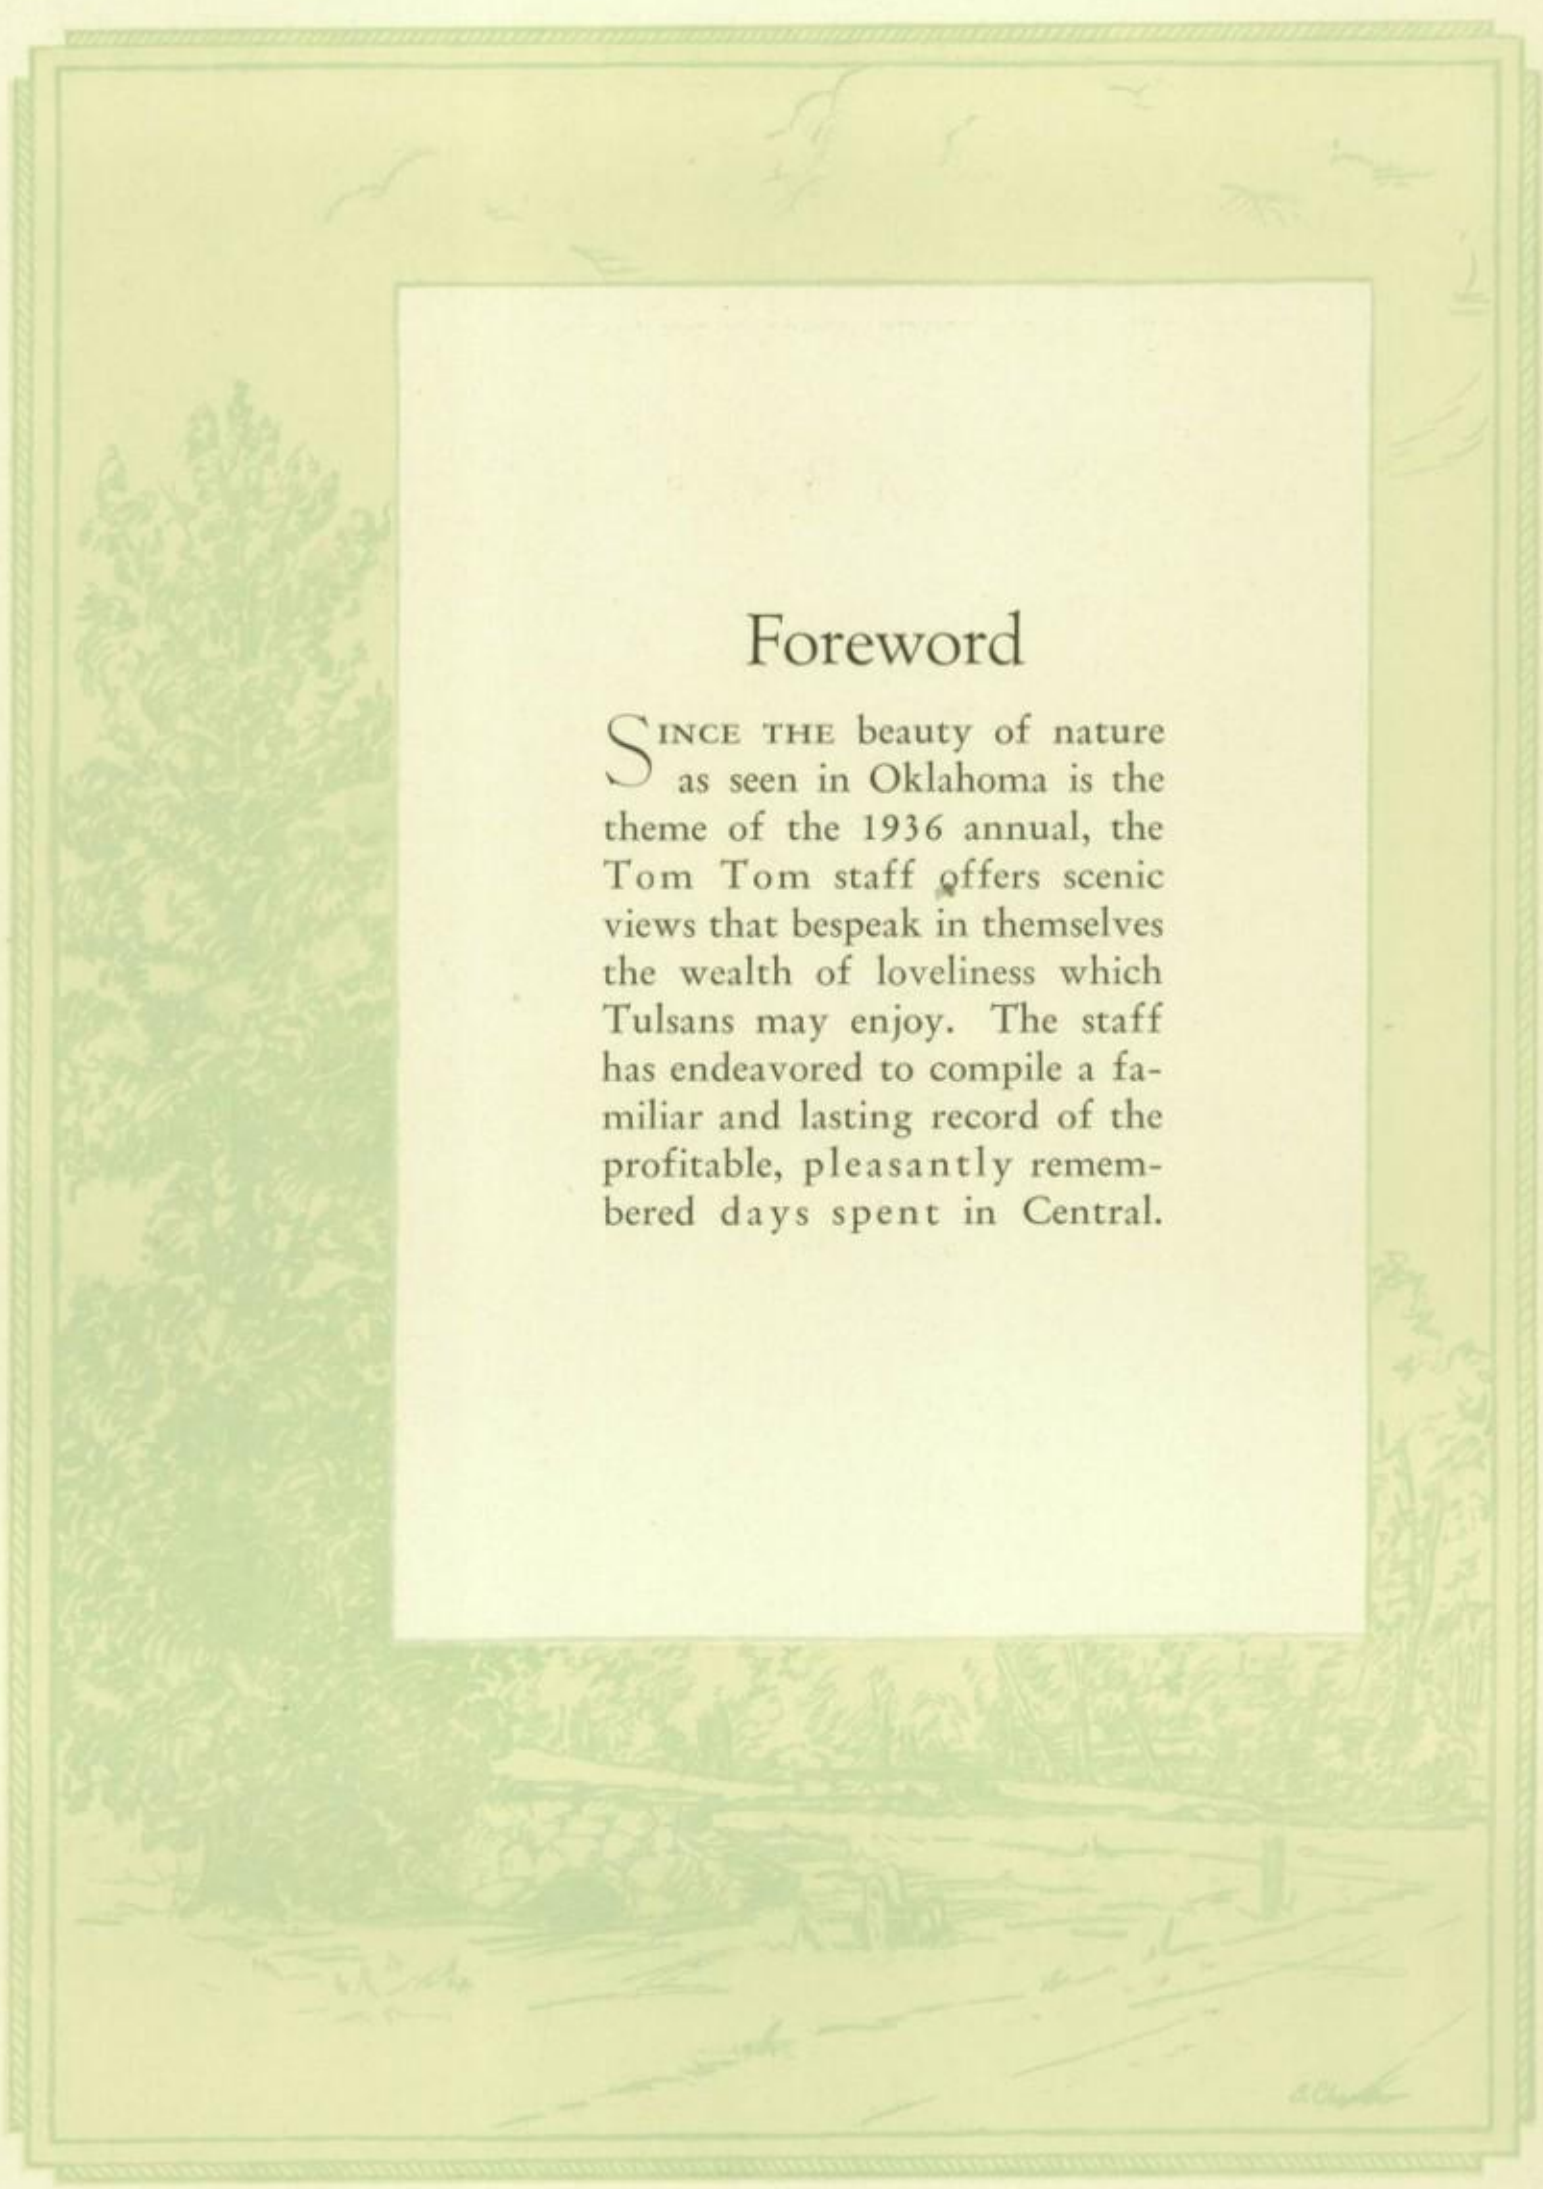

Dedication

NATURE calls for a multitude of followers: the sentimentalist, because of her dreamy moods; the humorist, because of her fickleness; the romanticist, because of her beauty; the realist, because of her sternness; the teacher, because of her instruction; the scientist, because of her mysteries; the physician, because of her healing power; the prophet, because of her revelation of God; the stalwart man, because of her sublime indifference, her merciless laws, her challenge to sagacity. To W. W. GRAHAM, stalwart man, nature lover, disciple of Isaac Walton, master craftsman of the art of printing, the Tom Tom staff gratefully dedicates this book.

Foreword

SINCE THE beauty of nature as seen in Oklahoma is the theme of the 1936 annual, the Tom Tom staff offers scenic views that bespeak in themselves the wealth of loveliness which Tulsans may enjoy. The staff has endeavored to compile a familiar and lasting record of the profitable, pleasantly remembered days spent in Central.

MEMBERS of the class of 1936 have been progressing toward the horizon of education for three years, setting new standards and attaining higher goals in character and service. They have entered into the pursuits of education and leisure with equal zest, demonstrating that they are talented, progressive, and earnest.

Under the sponsorship of their untiring and able directors, Miss Gertrude Rector, in the sophomore, and Miss Lulu B. Beckington, in the junior and senior years, the students have been successful participants in the curricular and extracurricular activities, and have achieved new scholastic standards. In the music, art, and athletic departments their talents have been displayed, and demonstrations of their dramatic abilities have been made in the class productions, Come Out of the Kitchen, The Show-Off, The Taming of the Shrew, and The Virginian.

Standing as leaders and scholars at the head of their class Marcella Gammon, Charles Roelke, and Fred Markgraf, class presidents, have endeared themselves to their classmates by their true worth. Using as guides the ideals and standards of Central High School, the seniors of 1936 have a firm foundation for their ventures into the field of higher education.

Junior Class

WITH THE completion of two successful years, the members of the largest junior class ever to have been enrolled in Central High School, look backward down the path of achievement which marks their progress, and face the future with hopeful hearts.

Guided by their counselors, Miss Ednamay Weeks, Miss Linnie B. Wilson, and Mrs. Maud Wendt, and by their youthful leaders, Wesley Watson in the sophomore year, and Reuben Snodgrass in their junior year, the students of the class of 1937 count among their honors the class productions of Daddy Long-Legs, in the sophomore year, and Tom Sawyer and Seven Keys to Baldpate, in their junior year.

Ever alert and prepared, the juniors are fully capable of assuming the responsibilities of the senior class, of carrying on the standards and ideals of their predecessors, and of realizing the accomplishment of their own aspirations.

Sophomore Class

HAVING equipped their caravans with the paraphernalia necessary to attain the lofty pinnacles of educational perfection, the sophomore class of 1936, youngest of Central pioneers in the field of knowledge, begin their task toward the goal of well-rounded faculties with determined and enthusiastic hearts.

Manifesting that they have developed a spirit of leadership and contribution with the other classes of Tulsa Central High School, the sophomores have seized every opportunity to maintain the standards set for them by their predecessors. Their talented presentation of Growing Pains was one of the highlights of the dramatic season.

It is in the sophomore year that friendships and contacts which last throughout high school, college, and oftentimes adult life are formed. It is here, too, that the spirit of unity and fellowship blends into harmonized conception.

The first year in high school is the test of endurance in secondary education, and under the skilled direction of Miss Gertrude Rector, with her assistants, Miss Maude Lourey, Miss Lela S. Copeland, and Miss Lucile Adams, and Bob Dow, the class president, the seniors of 1939 have made a flying start by their accomplishments.

In the University of Oklahoma and Stillwater meets and in the Interstate and invitational tournaments, the Braves gained runner-up honors. In dual competition they defeated the Muskogee netsters twice by scores of 12-0 and 8-3 and took a twin victory over the Bartlesville racquet wielders by 12-0 and 10-0 tallies. Miami's squad fell victims in two meets by 9-0 and 7-0 scores but the Classen Comets took an upset victory, 7-3.

The Tulsans opened their season with a 28-16 win over the Oklahoma City Central quintet, defeated the Sand Springs five, 33-15, and lost to the Classen Comets and the Capitol Hill Redskins.

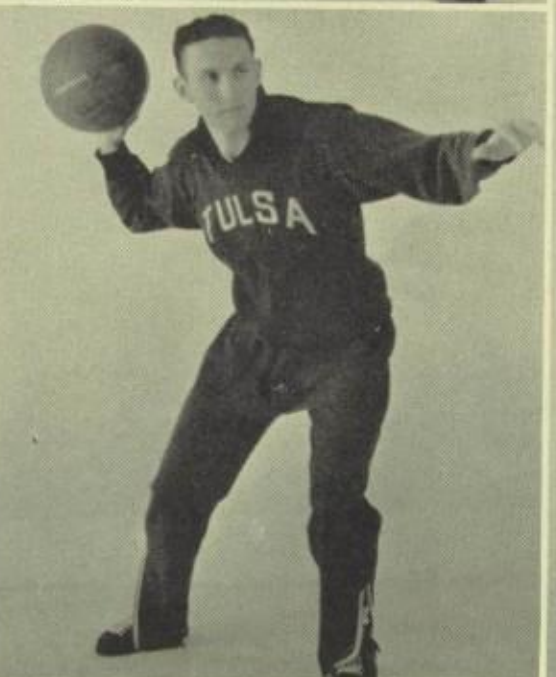

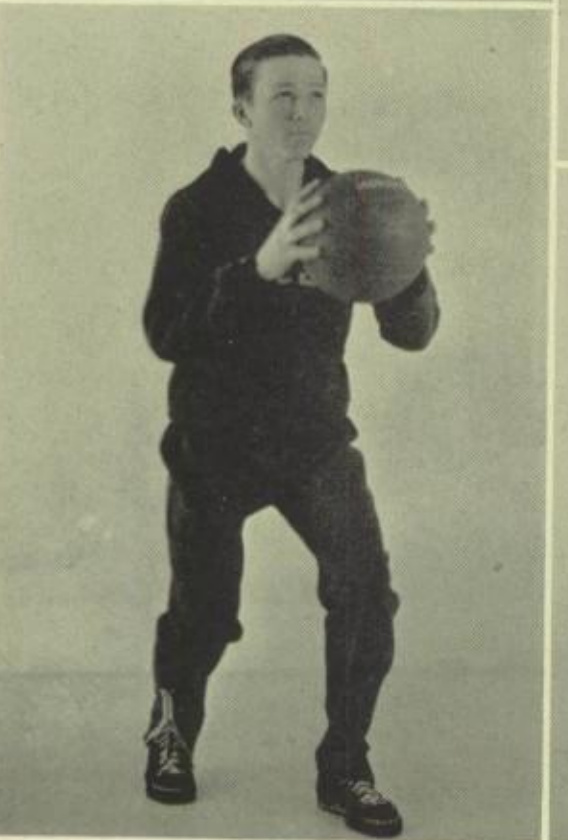

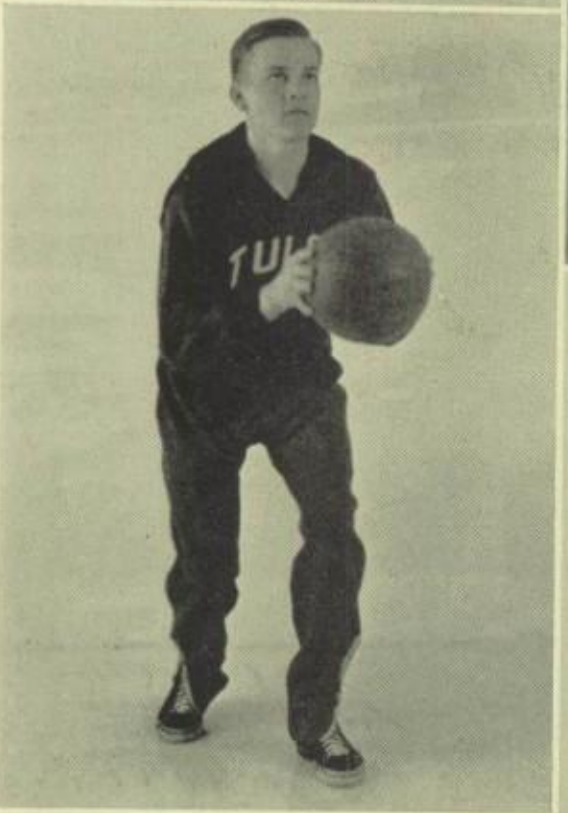

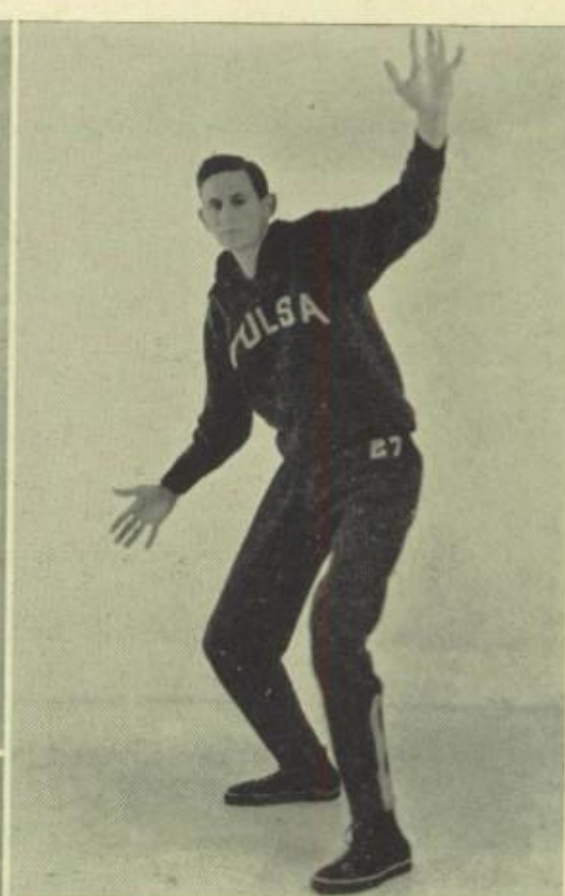

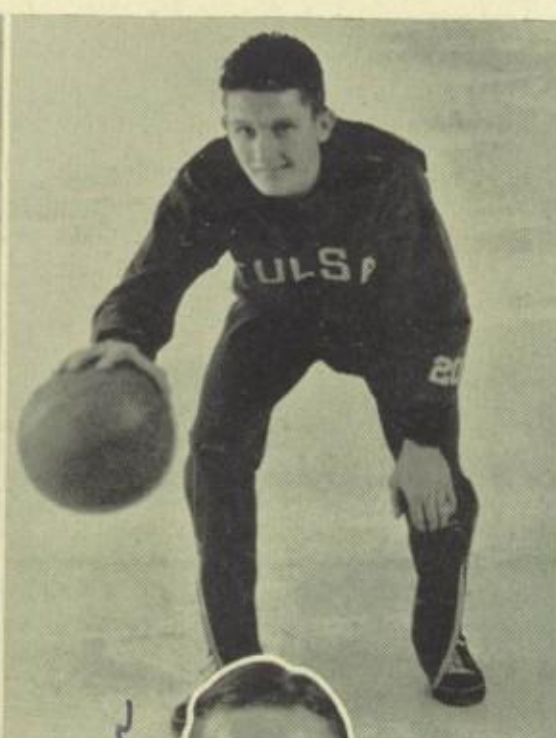

The Bartlesville Wildcats were defeated, 44-23, the Sapulpa Chieftains, 42-13, and the Sand Springs Sandites, 34-33. The Bristow, Okmulgee, and Muskogee quintets were defeated, and the Enid Plainsmen and the Blackwell five lost to the Braves.

The Oklahoma City Central cagers were vanquished again, but the Classen Comets gave the Braves their final loss of the season, 30-26. The Bristow, Sapulpa, Muskogee, and Bartlesville quintets were defeated in succession, as the Tulsa five completed its regular schedule.

In the district tourney, the Braves defeated the Tulsa Clinton, Broken Arrow, and Sand Springs five.

The Braves took the regional tournament championship with wins over the Miami five and the Bartlesville Wildcats.

With eight of their nine entries placing for state competition, the Tulsans breezed through the district tourney, taking the title by a lopsided score, and a week later won the unofficial state title, placing two weight champions, Floyd Benson and Hoy Stone.

The Ponca City Wildcats dropped a lopsided 20-0 contest to the Braves, and the Tulsa warriors smashed the Muskogee Roughers, 13-7, for the first time in ten seasons.

The Jamesmen played two ties, one with the Bartlesville Wildcats, 6-6, and another with the Purple Pirates of Bristow, 0-0. Classen's classy Comets took a 13-0 win from the Braves, and another capitol city team, the Central Cardinals, eked out a 7-0 victory.

National Honor Society

To uphold high ideals of character, to create enthusiasm for scholarship, and to give recognition to representative pupils, the National Honor Society was established in 1921 at a national meeting of high school educators.

A student receives the honor of election to membership in the society when he has "exhibited qualities of superior scholarship, trustworthy leadership, exemplary character, a spirit of unselfish service and loyal student citizenship during his high school course."

The Tulsa chapter of this organization was chartered December 19, 1923, and has since exerted a worthy influence on school life. For two years the society has successfully conducted a drive for clothing and shoes for indigent students. This year the organization is endeavoring to secure scholarships for its especially talented members.

Senate

To offer a means of cooperation between the students and the faculty, to be a medium of service to the high school, to promote high scholarship, and to investigate student problems, the Senate, student control body of Tulsa Central high school, was formed in 1920. As the first important school organization it began work under the supervision of Mrs. Louise Dodge Whitham, the present sponsor.

Senate members include the president and two elected senators from each affiliated high school organization, class senators, and three senators-at-large.

The organization has established a precedent this year in sponsoring a convention of student leaders from the city junior and senior high schools and the schools in the surrounding territory. The Senate is working on a point system, whereby there will be a fairer distribution of honors among the students.

Honor Study Hall

In October the Senate inaugurated an experiment involving the honor system used in so many large schools, but not previously tried in Central high school. With the approval of the administration, the Senate made an opportunity for serious-minded students to carry on their studying under their own supervision.

Forty students were carefully selected from numerous applications, placed under the direction of one of their number and left to study in the quiet they desired. The experiment proved so successful that three additional halls were established the second semester.

It is naturally expected as school years pass that these honor study halls will grow into a well-organized unit and be of material assistance to students as well as to the administration.

House of Representatives

The aim of the House is to promote a higher degree of democracy both in government and school thought, and its purpose is to increase student participation in school activities. Since 1925 this body has been rated the most representative and democratic of any organization in the high school.

The House is an open forum in which the problems of the school are discussed and in which the representatives present the desires of the school organizations and home rooms. Discussions follow suggestions and school-wide attitudes are formed, which are carried back to the home room to complete the cycle of democratic thought.

High scholastic and citizenship standings are necessary before a student can become a member of the House of Representatives.

House of Representatives

The House was organized in the fall of 1923. Each home room is allowed one representative who must meet the requirements of a major office holder. An exception is made in the case of sophomore class members, who are elected after the first nine weeks grades have been received.

The duties of the House members are diversified. Representatives of the organization rearrange the trophy rooms when necessary, and they also manage the lost and found department. Since two members serve on the extracurricular committee, each student has, in an indirect way, a part in the extracurricular program of the high school.

Sessions of the House are held on even Tuesdays of every month, and Mrs. Minnie Mae Summers, the dean of girls, acts as sponsor.

Courtesy Service Club

So numerous did the students of Central high school become in 1925 that a need was felt for a group of volunteers to aid in preserving order, in directing students and patrons around the building, and also to further high community ideals.

Thus the Courtesy Service Club was organized, with L. W. Lavengood, then dean of boys, as its sponsor. He was succeeded by F. J. Reynolds, and he was followed by M. M. Black, the present sponsor.

The membership of the Courtesy Service Club is limited to juniors and seniors who have passing grades in all subjects the semester they apply to the organization, and who have had no failures the previous semester.

Courtesy Service Club

To assist in keeping the high school building clean, and in maintaining order by stationing its members in the corridors during class periods, at cafeteria doors throughout the lunch period, and at the entrances to the auditorium at assemblies and plays, are the duties of the members of the Courtesy Service Club.

Among the manifold purposes of the club are the promotion of a feeling of good fellowship among the students and faculty, the stimulation of high ideals, and the encouragement of student participation in the school government.

Members must have high qualities of trustworthy service and good citizenship. The organization is one of the largest in the school.

Advertising Board

The purpose of the Advertising Board, which was organized in the spring of 1930, is to promote publicity for all non-class productions in Tulsa Central high school, by directing ticket sales and advertising.

The members are representatives from the Senate, Tulsa School Life, the art department, Speakers Bureau, Stagecraft, manual arts department, the sophomore, junior, and senior classes, and representatives selected from the school at large.

A representative to the Board is selected because of his willingness to work, his high character and satisfactory scholarship. Since its formation, the Board has had J. Roy Inbody as its faculty sponsor.

Speakers Bureau

Among the oldest of Central high school's organizations, the Speakers Bureau is outstanding in its purposes and achievements. Organized to include those students talented and interested in public speaking, it has served the two-fold purpose of developing experienced speakers and providing a connecting link between the school and community.

This year, although the activities of Speakers Bureau have been somewhat changed, its work has been distinguished. In addition to programs carried on by the group as a whole, individual members have made noteworthy contributions as chairmen in assemblies, winners in the fields of debate and oratory, and as speakers before civic and social clubs, thus, exemplifying its value to the high school and to the community.

A Cappella Choir

The A Cappella Choir which was formerly a combination of the Orpheus and the Saint Cecilia organizations, is now an independent organization. The term "A Cappella" means, literally, in the style of the church, but the modern meaning is "unaccompanied by any instrument."

All rehearsals and public appearances are conducted in A Cappella style, and the repertoire of the choir includes some of the finest known examples of this type of musical literature.

There is a genuine attempt to instill in others a deeper appreciation of the harmony of mixed voices. Robed in maroon vestments, the choir contributes much to the music life of the schools, church, and civic organizations of Tulsa.

Orpheus Club

A select group of forty well-trained boys who have distinguished themselves in vocal music composes the Orpheus Club of Tulsa Central high school. Reorganized in 1927, the club changed its name from the Hi-Glee Club to the Orpheus Club, taking its name from Orpheus, a Thracian poet and musician who was said to be the son of Apollo.

Membership in the Orpheus Club is based on vocal qualifications, ability, musicianship, personal citizenship, and general scholarship. The club is under the direction of George Oscar Bowen, and it has helped in the production of the Messiah, the opera, and the minstrel. The boys have been enthusiastically received by various civic clubs in the city and radio audiences.

The pin of the club is in the shape of an oval on which is engraved the lyre of Orpheus.

The Saint Cecilians offer their interpretations of the compositions of great masters in radio programs, before church groups, and at meetings of civic organizations.

St. Cecilia, to whom the organization pays tribute in its name, is regarded as the patron saint of music, especially of sacred music.

Through various and interesting activities the members of the club create, maintain, and extend high standards of Girl Scout fellowship.

To become a member of the organization, a girl must be less than eighteen years of age, and must promise to live up to Girl Scout standards.

Of all the high school organizations, the Student Custodians, who work an average of three hours daily, is the most vital to the health and attitude of the students in the school.

The boys repair and keep clean 106 rooms, the two auditoriums, the cafeteria, the gymnasiums, corridors, steps, and storerooms.

The idea of having the Student Custodians was originally conceived as a means of furnishing employment for high school boys who might find the expenses of high school beyond their means.

The sports in which team work is practiced are hockey, basketball, and baseball. The more individual sports are swimming, tennis, archery, dancing, skating, and horseback riding.

Membership in the organization is open to any girl who has been in the high school one semester and who has earned five athletic points.

The awards include a numeral to the members of a championship team, varsity stars to the best players chosen, pins to those who have earned 50 points, and T's to those who have earned 75 points. The Boswell trophy cup is given to the senior girl who has the highest athletic and scholastic average.

Alpha Chapter, Keystoneers

With "To create, maintain, and extend throughout the school and community, high standards of Christian character," as their aim, a group of high school girls founded the Keystone Hi-Y club in the fall of the year 1933.

Through the untiring guidance of their sponsors, Mrs. Max Morrison, Miss Faye Beard, and Miss Celestia Harrington, the Keystoneers have won for themselves a respected position in the eyes of the school and the city.

Membership in the Keystoneers is limited to junior and senior girls who have shown an earnest desire to live up to the ideals and purpose of the club.

Although this club has not yet passed its third birthday it is one of the most active in the school, and has the largest membership of any high school organization.

Through this change the efficiency of the club has been greatly increased, and the members have been given more chances to participate in the activities of the organization.

The three chapters working together have made great strides toward preserving their aims and making their purposes living principles.

Since its organization in 1915, its purpose has been to create, maintain, and extend the high standards of Christian fellowship throughout the school and community. W. H. Hake, J. L. Goff, Rector Swearengin, Max Morrison, and Ivan Singleton have served as sponsors.

Tom Tom

Tulsa Central high school has published a yearbook annually since 1909. The Tom Tom serves as an entertaining memory book and an interesting record of school activities for members of the faculty as well as for the students.

The annual, rated by national press associations as one of the best yearbooks in the United States, is the result of the efforts of three groups, the editorial class, the art class, and the high school print shop.

The theme of the book is selected in the spring of the previous year and developed by the editorial and art classes the first semester.

Parent-Teacher Association Board

Through the ages, parents and teachers have desired a closer contact with the children and pupils entrusted to their care. In Tulsa in 1920, the elders desired a closer contact with their children and from this desire there emanated an organization, the Parent-Teacher Association, whose purpose it is to create the desired friendship between students, teachers, and parents. Members of the organization give generously of their time and energy toward the promotion of the best interests of the school and community.

The high school adult organization offers scholarships and augments the student aid fund, but the feeling of friendship which it has established between parents, teachers, and students is worth immeasurably more than the monetary aid which it gives to Central high school.
